MISCELLANEOUS READING. SUBDUING A HORSE. The most exciting scene that we ever wit-lion was introduced into the arena. The horse looked round the audience, stood on his hind legs, ploughed up the ground; and presented the most vivid picture of a wild and inreclaimable beast. He literally roared in fury, and kicked out of pure viciousness .-He snapped at the spectators, snapped at the groom and Mr. Rarey, and actually bit his own flesh, severely in his passion. He tore to pieces every strap which was placed upon him, hurling the groom, who had come to Rarey's assistance, ignominiously the whole length of the arena. At one time the horse broke clear away from all, and stood for a moment as a conscious victor in the midst of the excited audience. Mr. Dycer and Mr. Farrell both came to Mr. Rarey's help, but they were utterly unable to hold the animal. He scattertered every man and every thing around him like chaff. He was bathed in a white foam, and sending up clouds of vapor from his body. At one moment he tossed up the straw wildly, at another he sent the strong barriers flying in all directions; and for some time he stood the complete personification of diablerie alone in the arena, roaring furiously, and tearing at the barriers with his teeth. Mr. Rarey, having washed his hands and rested for a few minutes, again ventured to approach him. Then began a contest such as no one who ever witnessed it can forget. It was a struggle of art and tact against overwhelming strength. Whoever saw that combat could never be sceptical as to the wonderful power of Mr. Rarey. For fully an hour the battle, for it was nothing else, continued; now the man had gained the mastery, now the horse, and the animal, touching the earth seemed to derive fresh strength from every fall. At last Mr. Rarey extemporised a strap from the fragments of the broken bridle, and had gained his first step to conquest; still the horse fought fiercely, rising in air, and plunging in all directions, endeavoring to bite his assailant or trample him down .-

Times. THE FRUIT CROP .- In a lengthy article upon the fruit crop, the New York Tribune

It gave one some idea of the animating scenes of the Roman amphitheatre to see a compact, slight, but sinewy man, confronting so furious and vicious an animal. A long struggle ensued, but eventually the panting and thoroughly subdued .- Irish savs :-Peaches have failed, almost entirely, over a great extent of country where they once gave great crops of good fruit. Numerous farms now, are wholy destitute of peach trees, where they once flourished most luxuriantly. This year we hear of better prospects than before for many years, where there are a few trees remaining, and we begin to hope that the diseases which have prevented the production of this most delicious of all fruits, in its ancient glory, may be passing away. From the great peach field of New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, and furher south, we expect a better supply this year than for several years past. Pears, which have not been of late what they were in the good old time, give a fair pee, A. M., author of "Elements of Rhetoric and promise this year: the curculio has not destroyed them as much as usual. Apples hang upon the limbs in such profusion that the trees will be sure to be broken with their overloads, or greatly injured, unless the owners take the precaution to strip off about half the quantity now growing, by which the quality would be improved, and the crop not much diminished, and injury to trees prevented. The smaller fruits-plumbs, berries, &c. -it thinks, are in the greatest profusion throughout the country.

The confession of Harden will not be made public until the day of his execution, or perhaps after, when it will be published, together with a history of his life written by himself, in book form, the copyright of which will be secured for the benefit of his father. There are many rumors as to the details of the confessions, none of which are reliable.
